

Code Switching

Code-switching is the practice of moving between variations of languages in different contexts.

- Everyone who speaks has learned to code-switch depending on the situation and setting.
- In an educational context, code-switching is defined as the practice of switching between a primary and a secondary language or discourse.